Last Saturday the Sioux Lookout Memorial Arena hosted a charity hockey game for The Push for Change Foundation. The Push for Change Foundation is in place to raise money to help end youth homelessness in Canada. The Sioux Lookout Ontario Provincial Police and the Sioux Lookout volunteer firefighters faced off against each other to raise money for the foundation.

The Push for Change was started by Joe Roberts, a former homeless addict who managed to turn his life around and become a successful business man. On May 1 of 2016, Roberts embarked on a journey to walk across Canada with a shopping cart to raise awareness of youth homelessness.

Roberts, along with his fellow founder, Sean Richardson, a former elite athlete, have a shared passion for helping people see more in themselves as well as showing them that they are capable of overcoming life's biggest obstacles.

"We will not be satisfied until we have a nation of people in action. We want to engage Canadians in thinking differently about the extraordinary impact we can have when we work together, and then motivate them to get in unstoppable action to effect change in our country one community at a time," Roberts said.

All the monetary proceeds from the hockey game went to The Push for Change Foundation and the non-perishable food items were donated to the Nishnawbe Gamik Friendship Centre Food Bank.
